NOTED ATHLETES AT DIX ARE REJECTED

Famous Ball Players Among Those Found Physically Deficient.

MANY HAVE POOR HEARTS

Southerners Want to Go Home to Get Chance to Cool Off.

CAMP DIX, WRIGHTSTOWN, N. J., Aug. 10.- "A mule has more brains than any torse that ever lived, and yet, the average man feels elated when he is told he has horse sense and wants to lick the fellow who calls him a jackass," said an old army sergeant at the remount depot, Just look at that bunch of animals if you want an illustration." And he pointed to a big corral in which were pointed to a big corral in which were about 200 horses and mules.

"Those horses will stand out in the blazing sun all day," continued the sergeant. "But look at the mules. They are strung out all along that fence. The fence doesn't look as if it could afford any protection from the sun, but you'll find there is just enough shadow to cover the mule's back.

"When the day warms up every mule in the herd will wander over to the fence on the south side of the corral and line up in that streak of shade. Then, as the afternoon wears on, they will work around to find the shadow on the western side of the field. Yes, sir, give me the mule every time for so-called horse sense."

Just as the Delaware men of the Fifty-ninth Pioneers were delighted to come North last winter to get warm, so the Southern officers and enlisted men in training here now wish they could go South to cool off. To the men of the Eighty-seventh Division especially, most of whom come from the southern Mississippi Valley, the hot weather of the last week has come as the biggest surprise of their army training. They came to Camp Dix boasting of the hot weather they had experienced at Camp Pike,

We take our hats off to Jersey when "We take our hats off to Jersey when it comes to hot weather," said a prominent officer of the division. "We thought we had warm weather in the South but you've got us beaten to a frazzle. Even when the thermometer flirts with the century mark during the day down yondah the nights are refreshingly cool, while up here it begins to heat up for the next day before it starts to cool off from the day before." from the day before."

from the day before."

In proportion to their representation among recruits professional athletes show a record of more physical rejections than any other group of men called into the National Army at this post. This paradoxical situation has been true since the opening of the camp, and other cantonments probably have had a similar experience.

Many of the men who have stood up and taken the worst kind of punishment in a short ring battle show under the ex-pert examinaton of surgeons that they lack the stamina to go through a long

Many Ball Players Rejected.

Well known ball players are rejected for poor heart action or some physical aliment that has not interfered with their earning fame and a livelihood on the diamond. Some of them are sent home and others into the non-combatant service. The percentage of those who win a place in the line regiments is con-siderably below that of Mr. Average Man.

The situation has so impressed athletic officers of the various regiments that they no longer count upon using some star athlete who has been drafted into camp until he is well past the physical examinations and ready for assignment to a regular unit. In a recent draft there were three famous bail play-ers, a boxer and a rusher with a track championship, all of whom fell down on the final examination for one cause or

Different from the usual cause of rejection in these cases was the experience of Lewis Santop of the Lincoln Giants of New York, who arrived in a recent colored draft. He is rated as one of the heaviest hitters on the American dia-mond to-day and he was looked upon as mond to-day and he was looked upon as an important addition to the negro team at Dix. But when the doctors at the camp came to examine him they found he had a broken and badly twisted arm as a result of a baseball accident several years ago. It made it impossible for him to handle a gun or salute properly, and so he has been discharged as physically unfit for army service.

Navy Deaths Below Peace Times WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—The death rate in the navy for the last week was 1.2 per thousand, a much lower rate than in peace times. The health of the navy, both ashore and affoat, continues excellent, Secretary Daniels said to-day.
